

Lost

I sit here with you, we're drinking tea
Feel so relaxed, it's what you do to me
The sun sinks orange behind the trees
It's so easy here with you, let me be

It's like I'm lying in a warm and shallow sea
Where the golden sun it shines on down
And a stillness, it washes over me
And the cares I brought here with me, well they can't be found

But while outwardly all is so calm
My defences, they are down, and I'm quite disarmed
I never noticed what you've done
There's a secret tunnel in my head that you've begun

There's no sense of hurry here
As we listen to the silence, you and me
No need to worry, or to fear
Time flies, now dark sky, million stars to see

And we talk of lover's lost
Of sadnesses, of tearful days
And wonder how we bore the cost
But dreamers both, we've always found some means to pay

But while outwardly all is so still
Your forces fill the tunnel, and they scent the kill
They're kicking the doors down inside my head
That kept my life in ordered threads

The crescent moon it lights your hair
Crickets sing, I've never seen the stars so bright
Tea long gone cold, but do we care
Both too lost in dreams to want to say goodnight

But while outwardly all is so quiet
Inside my head, well, you've won the fight
I think you know that it's what you do
Battle's over before it started and I'm lost to you